DEMOCRATS RUN AWAY FROM THIS RECORD

It has been suggested that the reason the democratic senators are such hard and continuous talkers is due to the lung power they have developed over a period of six years in running away from their record. Whether or not this explains the tireless talking qualities of Heflin, Harrison, Cawthon, et al., it is a fact that the democrats this year are already beginning to flee from their paramount issue and peerless leader of 1920.

No democrat would have been so bold as to have defied President Wilson and his league of nations two years ago and said: "None did."

Senator Reed of Missouri attempted it and as a result was defeated at a seat in the democratic national convention as a delegate from his state. This year Reed ran for re-election against one of Wilson's pets. Wilson made Reed an issue. He wrote three letters to the state demanding Reed's defeat. As a result Reed was nominated.

In Mississippi Wilson gave orders in 1918 for Cawthon to be defeated in the primaries and Pat Harrison nominated. The order was carried out. Now Cawthon runs in the primaries and is the leading candidate despite the fact that Wilson ordered to be defeated. And this is the democracy trying to forget the year of 1920 and the whip that the autocrat in the White house at that time laid on the shoulders of all those who dared to differ from him.

But yesterday the word of Caesar might have stood against the world; mine none so poor to the him reverence.

The thing which prevents this exhibition of the democratic party's fleeing from its 1920 position from being classified as distressing is the fact that this is an old stunt of the democratic party. Forgetting in one campaign what they advocated in previous campaign years has become a biennial habit of the democratic party. The memory of those living can easily recall examples during the more recent years.

The latest political hoax which it played upon the country was during the campaign of 1916 which it won by the cry "he kept us out of war," while all the time he was preparing to rush us into war. By 1920 it had so forgotten its desire to keep us out of war that it was trying to fasten upon the American people the league of nations which would have kept us perpetually in war.

Having lost that campaign by an adverse majority of something like seven million votes, it now looks around for another fake issue. It has raised the cry of a "do nothing congress," thinking again to befuddle and fool the voting public just as it did with "he kept us out of war" and "imperialism" and "16 to 1."

Proof that the democratic party has no leadership, is not founded upon any enduring principle, is largely kept together by the cohesive power of malcontent and does not know its destination is the fact that never in two campaigns in succession does it advocate the same policy or go to the people upon the same issue. Its policies and campaign slogans are one night stands and they are never billed for a return engagement for obvious reasons.

SOUND MONEY

The advocates of sound money have, in all times, been forced to defend their position against the antagonism of those who believe that cheap, unsound money can perform the function of money supported by a metallic base. Even the lessons of Austria, Germany and Russia do not seem to convince the opponents of the gold standard, probably because they have not come in contact with the actual working of the paper money system, says Mining Congress Journal.

A year of actual residence in Russia taught Emma Goldman more of the advantages of stable government than she had learned in this country during a life time. Henry Ford's proposal that a lean tariffs, the duties collected upon imports have been larger in both rate and amount than under democratic tariffs, so that considered from the standpoint of "revenue only" the republican tariff is better. Nevertheless in the hope of giving the country a false notion of what the present tariff bill proposes, the democratic leaders in congress and the democratic press are picturing it as a "prohibitive tariff" which will leave American consumers at the mercy of American "robber barons." No man who knows American tariff history will be deceived.

BOUNTIFUL CROPS

Homage of the harvest will be a festival, indeed, this year. Nature promises her limit of bounty for the prosperity of the American people. Industry, wide-awake, is chafing to break the speed laws. Clashing elements among human atoms alone mar at the moment the prospect for a Thanksgiving in the late autumn of exceptional significance.

It has been a glorious season for the crops of the country, according to the August report of the government. Since the previous month's report the outlook for the harvest of many staples has increased by tens of millions of bushels. The figures are those of war debts and loans now applied to products that feed the people, challenge the capacity of commerce and enrich the nation. It is summarized in the word "bumper." A 3,000,000,000 bushel corn crop for the fourth time in the history of farming in the United States; a 93,100,000 ton hay crop, beating the 1919 crop by 1,300,000 tons; the second largest crop of white potatoes ever grown in the country—40,000,000 bushels; a record crop of sweet potatoes; a 200,000,000 bushel crop of apples, more than double that of last year; a peach crop second only to the record crop of 1915; the fourth largest crop of tobacco ever grown, estimated at 1,425,000,000 pounds; such are the forecasts based on the surveys of the government experts. The full details are almost romantic in their statistical immensity; more interesting than midsummer fiction read in hammocks at the seashore or in the mountains.

The crops are the basis of every people's prosperity, and when there be added to a bountiful harvest industrial health and vigor such as are reported from other governmental sources the nonmaterialization of tremendous prosperity can be due only to the contrariness in man. The natural combination spells employment, and the dethronement of old High Cost of Living.

NO WORK, NO EATS

Gompers protests that no man shall be compelled to work. He won't get much support for that theory. No man should be compelled to work at any particular job at any particular time, but every man should be required to work at something a sufficient time to earn his living and make himself useful to humanity. There is an ancient rule that "if any man will not work, neither shall he eat." The rule is as good today as it ever was, and all people who earn their livings by honest industry will endorse it.

NATION COMES FIRST

President Harding appealed to the reason and the conscience of the country in his recent address to congress. He appealed to the country's reason in his analysis of the industrial situation. He appealed to its conscience in his call for laws and for the enforcement of laws to protect vital public interests.

The right of the public to the operation of its essential industries is paramount. Otherwise the national would be at the mercy of any group that felt able to interrupt one of these industries.

COURT FOR WAR ABOLISHMENT IS BEING PLANNED

Letters Addressed by Director General of Pan-American Union Society

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 5.—An international court of arbitration "whose purpose and function shall be the avoidance of war and the peaceful settlement of international disputes" is formally resolved upon by the Pan-American Round Table of San Antonio, according to announcement today by Florence T. Griswold, director general.

Dispatches from Washington recently giving prominence to a proposed American league of nations have occasioned the sending of a letter by the director general of the local round table to Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union, Washington, and President Brum of Uruguay, South America, suggesting that a pan-American court of arbitration would be of greater significance. The republics of South America, for many years, frequently have made effective use of the principles of arbitration, reads a resolution of the local body, sent to Washington, and "in one instance the president of the United States tendered the services of this country alone, or in conjunction with other countries of this hemisphere, to render all possible assistance in solving an international dispute between Chile and Peru."

It also is the earnest desire of the local body, based on its proximity and closeness of connection with Mexico, to "stimulate a stronger friendship with Mexico by creating a common ground where our people can meet with Mexicans for the purpose of solving our international problems upon a basis of free acceptance of the material interests of any race by the people and not upon a favored group."
